

A Model for Rotating 2-Dimensional Liquid Drops

Andrei Ludu

Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, 32114 Daytona Beach, USA

E-mail: ludua@erau.edu

ABSTRACT

There are many different physical systems at different scales (lab liquid drops, hurricanes) presenting regular polygons boundary patterns at the center of a rotating mass of fluid. We present a theoretical model which tries to explain this behavior, and compare it with experiments of liquid nitrogen drops, and with satellite pictures of hurricanes.